

According to the USDA NASS, 9.4 billion birds and mammals were slaughtered for food in the United States during 2005.

This figure includes only those who were slaughtered in federally inspected plants—hundreds of millions more were killed elsewhere or never made it to slaughter.

